Tasting notes

---

This was showing beautifully last night and really epitomises the quality coming from Sicily at the moment. Local varietal Nerello Mascalese offers succulent red fruit with structure and power, and this Rosso is a wonderful example. A very expressive and generous bouquet of strawberries, redcurrants and notes of sweet brambles explode from the glass. This is pale in colour but do not be fooled as there is power and real va va voom on the palate. Lots of sweet fruit is backed up by silky tannins and uplifting freshness. The minerality comes from the volcanic soils of Mt Etna and with hints of spice sneaking in on the finish this delicious wine has extraordinary depth. Pietradolce's Etna Rosso will accompany charcuterie, hard cheeses and light lunches perfectly. For me though, I would lightly chill it and serve it with a rare roast beef sandwich (complete with spicy rocket and a dollop of horseradish). For a slightly more serious version, the Archineri is the next level up, but you will need a couple of years for that to soften.

A delicate, light red with a light colour, sliced stawberry and cream character, a medium body and a fresh finish. Lovely drinking wine now. 90 points. James Suckling

About the producer

Since its founding in 2005 Pietradolce has come to own one of the largest collections of pre-phylloxera vines on Mt Etna, up to 120 years old. This active volcano commands the winery's devotion and respect, the complex volcanic soils producing truly phenomenal wines with real energy and nuance. Owner Michele Faro and winemaker Giuseppe Parlavocchio focus exclusively on local varieties Nerello Mascalese and Carricante, producing a range of pure, terroir-driven wines roughly structured as Village, Premier Cru, and Grand Cru.
